

Tony Adams

I have lived in Dannemora since mid 2007 with my wife of 15 years, Kelly and our three children, having moved here from Central Otago.

My background is in Engineering Management, and has been for seventeen years within the Civil Construction Industry. I started my career as a civil engineer and now hold the position of Contracts

Manager for Fulton Hogan Auckland, a company I have been employed by for the past fifteen years.

My involvement with Willowbank School started when my two oldest children, Mackenzie and Braytten, enrolled at Willowbank when we relocated from Alexandra and will continue for some time with my youngest son, Brylie, starting at the school this term.

My motivation to stand for the Board of Trustees comes from being a proud father with a passion to see my children and others succeed in the challenging world that they are growing up in.

I believe I can bring a lot to the position of board member with the experience I have gained managing several large projects and the challenges that come with managing approximately two hundred staff. Being a board member, I will be able to contribute to the successful outcomes of the school which will give all the children a good grounding in the early stages of their education. In order to create a successful leadership team, I believe there needs to be honesty, integrity and the ability to actively contribute to a team environment. All of these personal attributes and skills are important to me and I will do my best to assist this governance team.

Apart from family sport and activities, some of my interests are sea fishing, personal fitness, running several times a week, snow skiing and playing Presidents rugby.

I look forward to being an active member of the board which needs to lead the school through the challenging times ahead implementing the new curriculum guidelines and the new national standards frame work.

Regards
